

New Public Architecture

Jeremy Myerson

The mid-1990s have seen a resurgence of interest and investment in public architecture. Civic authorities have been faced with the challenge of regenerating run-down cities and regions after the recession of the early years of the decade, and of attracting investment and jobs to their regions. These conditions have inspired a new generation of magnet buildings and interiors. This work examines more than 50 of the most outstanding of these projects, including libraries, museums, town halls, art, media and convention centres, schools and universities, theatres and concert halls, as well as a synagogue, swimming baths, an aquarium and an embassy. The text chronicles the progress of a new spirit in design and architecture of public spaces and reveals how the traditional forms of the buildings are being reinvented by architects and designers around the world in clever and surprising ways.

- Paganini e la chitarra: un matrimonio da non farsi
- Poder y Sociedad : La Sociologia Politica En Talcott Parsons
- The Papers of Ulysses S. Grant: November 1, 1876-September 30, 1878 Volume 28
- Northern Kingdom, the 18-Copy Solid Floor Display
- Pesce & frutti di mare